Fall 2006 Course Information

First-year students are encouraged to consider a First-Year Seminar, because this is a small class (limited to 20 participants) that allows you to interact with University faculty and other students on a more personal level. Many topics from a wide range of academic disciplines are available. Enrollment in a First-Year Seminar may also help you fulfill an area distribution or general requirement. Be sure to check the requirements of the UM school or college in which you are enrolled.

Enrollment in a First-Year Seminar is not guaranteed. Fall seminars remain closed until New Student Orientation begins in June, with spaces opened incrementally during the summer. Students wishing to enroll in a seminar should attend Orientation with several options in mind.

Offerings are subject to change. The LSA Course Guide can provide you with up-to-date course descriptions and schedule information throughout the summer: www.lsa.umich.edu/cg/, and you will be able to discuss options with University staff during your Orientation session.
