This course will focus on two aspects of social change through the lenses of gender and global feminisms. First we will consider how individuals generally, and feminists in particular, are shaped by changing political and economic conditions, especially during times of upheaval and rapid social transformation. We will, of course, also examine how this is different for individuals who are not raised to adulthood in such times. Second, we will examine how and why some individuals become engaged in creating social change (and others do not).

For both parts of the course, we will draw on theoretical literature in feminist theory and in social science, and on studies of the impact of social events on individuals and the role of individuals in creating social change. We will also draw upon the Global Feminisms Project, an online archive of oral histories with feminist activists in five countries (Nicaragua, Poland, China, India and the U.S.) as a source of material in thinking about both issues.

Required reading:

3. Interviews with participants in the Global Feminisms Project. These are noted on the syllabus as GFP, by name and the site. The overall website is: http://www.umich.edu/~glbifem/en/index.html
4. All other readings are on the Ctools website for this course under Resources.

Sequence of Readings and Classes

9/3 Introduction to Course, Participants, and Global Feminisms Project as a Resource

Note: In this class we will practice accessing the GFP website interviews as transcripts and digital recordings, as well as how to document sections you want to remember. You will need this information throughout the course.

Third paper due 12/16, 5 pm

Class Participation

We will be spending much of our class time generating knowledge together in the classroom. You must therefore (1) be there; (2) be prepared by reading the assigned material, searching for examples, creating lists and timelines, etc.; and (3) participate in the classroom discussion. Occasionally there will be written exercises associated with particular classes, which will be part of this participation. Plan to contribute to the conversation during every class meeting, and not to miss more than 3 class sessions in the course of the semester to receive full credit (25% of final grade).

Assignments

For each of these assignments write a paper that is 5-8 pages double-spaced with a 12-point font; that is, between 1250 and 2000 words.

First paper:
Write an account of three members of your extended family (one may be you, but does not have to be) that articulates how developmental stage, history and generation were important in their autobiography. Draw out similarities and differences between these three people’s experiences and the cases we have examined (the five GFP cases and Marzi). You do not need to include all six of the cases we have discussed, but be sure you discuss at least three.
Due 10/20, 5 pm

Second paper:
Choose an issue that interests you that is not covered explicitly on the syllabus played out in two different national-historical contexts (examples might include land reform, economic development, labor, sex trafficking, marriage and divorce rights, inheritance, etc.). Draw on at least one GFP interview from each country that provides insight into this issue. Your goal is to illuminate the ways that the different national-historical context mattered for the way the issue was experienced or addressed. You are free to find material from outside the course to supplement that in the course, but this is not required.
Due 11/19, 5 pm

Third paper:
Choose at least two of the strategies and practices (violence and protest; inventing new services; using the arts; and changing laws and institutions) we have considered. Drawing on both GFP interviews and contextual materials from the course, explain how those strategies were employed to address some issue (it doesn’t have to be the same issue) in two different national-historical contexts. Discuss the benefits and costs associated with each strategy or practice as demonstrated in GFP interviews (at least one from each context). Conclude by suggesting how you think this issue might best be addressed in the next ten years in each of the countries (either using one of the strategies or practices we have explored OR proposing how an emergent new practice might work in that context).

Due Tuesday, 12/16, 5 pm

Grading

Each paper and class participation will contribute 25% to the final grade for the course. All assignments must be completed to pass the course.
