

Center for Chinese Studies Public Lecture Series
University of Michigan ▪ Fall 2011

Prospects for US-China Relations

Kenneth Lieberthal

Senior Fellow and Director
John L. Thornton China Center
The Brookings Institution

Thursday, October 20, 2011

6:00pm: Reception

Lobby of Blau Auditorium
Ross School of Business

7:00pm: Presentation

Blau Auditorium
Ross School of Business

Ross School of Business
701 Tappan Street
Ann Arbor, Michigan

The US-China relationship is often called the most important bilateral relationship in the world for good reason. How effectively the two countries deal with each other can affect almost every significant regional and global issues. Yet, any realistic view of the future has to include the reality of great uncertainties about the future evolution of US-China relations. This presentation will address the major forces that are likely to shape US-China relations in the coming year and offer suggestions for effective US policy.

Dr. Lieberthal is Senior Fellow in Foreign Policy and in Global Economy and Development and Director of the John L. Thornton China Center at the Brookings Institution. He is Professor Emeritus at U-M, where until 2009 he was Arthur F. Thurnau Professor of Political Science and William Davidson Professor of Business Administration. He previously taught at Swarthmore College during 1972-83. He has a B.A. from Dartmouth College, and two M.A.'s and a Ph.D. in Political Science from Columbia University.

Dr. Lieberthal served as Special Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs and Senior Director for Asia on the National Security Council from August 1998 to October 2000. His government responsibilities encompassed American policy toward all issues involving Northeast, East, and Southeast Asia.

This presentation is sponsored by the Center for Chinese Studies of the University of Michigan .

U-M Center for Chinese Studies
Suite 4668 SSWB
1080 South University
Ann Arbor, MI 48109-1106

P: 734-764-6308
F: 734-764-5540
E: chinese.studies@umich.edu
W: www.ii.umich.edu/ccs

