Welcome to Section!

Objectives and Format

The purpose of section is to provide you with the opportunity to discuss issues related to human development and psychology in greater depth. The format will be flexible and will vary from week to week. Generally, class will consist of discussion, collaborative group work, experiential activities, and presentations. I will also do my best to reserve the beginning of each class for any questions or other concerns you may be having about lecture, the textbook, etc. In addition, discussion questions will be posted several days prior to section each week to focus and guide reading of the textbook. I expect everyone to review these questions before class each week and to come to class prepared to incorporate your reactions and questions into the class activities.

General Policy

- Attendance: As stated on the course syllabus, attendance is REQUIRED. Unexcused absences will be penalized with a 5 point deduction from your final course grade. Unless you have a good excuse (e.g., religious holidays, illness, university function), you should attend all classes. To receive an excused absence, you must contact me BEFORE CLASS and you must complete a comparable alternative assignment. Regardless of the reason behind your absence, you are responsible for any material that we cover in section.

- General requirements: I want this course to be an enjoyable learning experience for everyone. In order to get the most out of this class, it is essential that you:
  a) attend both lectures and discussion sections regularly
  b) read the weekly assignments beforehand and review discussion questions
  c) think critically about the readings
  d) complete all assignments on-time
  e) actively participate in all discussions and activities

- Class participation: I expect everyone to come to class prepared to actively participate in class discussions, having carefully read and thought about the material beforehand. I value most those discussions in which you are doing most of the talking. Interacting with each other and with the course material, I believe, is more important than interacting with me (at least during class time). Rather than arguing and debating with one another, it is more important to discuss issues in a respectful and cooperative manner, building on each other’s ideas. Of course, there will be time for vigorous debate and disagreement, but we will strive to accomplish this in a climate of mutual respect and trust. I am aware of the difficulty in participating in large groups and know that some people may feel uncomfortable speaking out. Nevertheless, I encourage you to take risks and to share your ideas. Please also feel free to come and talk with me during my office hours. I am looking forward to working with you and will do my best to be available and responsive to any questions or concerns that you may have.

- Grading Policy: Because you are given a good deal of choice in due dates for the assignments in this class, there will be NO extensions granted and NO assignments will be accepted after the last day of class. Late assignments will be deducted by 3 points for each day late - including weekends. I do not typically check my mailbox on the weekend, so if you have to turn in an assignment on Saturday or Sunday, please e-mail it to me as an attachment. Any assignment you have not handed in by the last day of section (Dec. 7th) will receive a zero.

- Paper format: Papers for this course should be typed (with standard fonts/margins) and double-spaced. Please include your name, date, assignment title, and section number on all assignments. Please also proofread, spell-check, and staple!
Evaluation and Grading

Out of the 500 possible points in the entire course, 120 points of your final course grade will come from section. This course is very work-intensive and requires a lot of effort on your part - there is something due almost every week, so it is important that you stay organized and keep up with all the readings/assignments. The point distribution for the course as a whole is as follows:

- Exams: 240 points (80 points each)
- Developmental Project: 140 points
- Application Paper/Project: 40 points
- Group Presentation: 30 points
- Research Article Critique: 20 points
- Class Participation: 20 points
- Bring in Discussion Article Piece: 10 points

Your section grade will be determined from the following:

a) Section participation (20 points total)

'Active participation' means much more than just showing up to class. In order for us to have a dynamic, lively learning environment, I would like to see participation from everyone. The best way to learn this material in a meaningful way is to contribute ideas in discussions, pose questions, and be sincerely engaged in the learning process. Please come to class prepared with at least one question or comment about the reading for that week (this can be in response to the discussion questions posted on the website). Participation points can be lost if you are not being respectful or responsible to yourself or your classmates (talking during class, reading the paper during class, not allowing others a chance to talk, etc.) Again, as outlined above under "General policies", any unexcused absence will result in a 5 point deduction in the final grade.

b) Discussion Article Piece (10 points)

For the third week of section, bring in a recent (past 6 months) newspaper or magazine article written on an issue related to infant development. Be ready to discuss the article and its main points in your groups. Draw connections between what is presented in the article and what has been covered in the lectures, videos, and reading. Write a short outline of key points for discussion.

c) Research Article Summary and Critique (20 points)

This assignment requires that you write a 3-4 page evaluation of an empirical article from a reputable psychology journal. You can pick your own topic for this paper, but the journal must have been published in the year 2000. For this assignment, I would like for you to give relevant background, briefly outline the purpose of the study, hypotheses, methods, and findings (1/2 to 1 page of the paper). More importantly, however, I would like you to think critically and respond to the following questions as they relate to the article:

- How effective (or ineffective) was the study in answering the questions at hand? Discuss strengths and weaknesses of the study.
- Was there a logical reasoning behind the way the study was designed?
- Are the findings generalizable? How relevant is the study cross-culturally?
- Were there important points that were left out that you think should have been given more attention?

Also keep these questions in mind as you do reading for the final project. Please staple a copy of your article to the back of your paper. You will have three due date options to turn in this research article critique. I encourage everyone to do this assignment early on in the semester to alleviate the stress that often arises at the end of the semester. If you are unsure of an article or a journal, please come see me as soon as possible.

The due dates (choose one) for turning in the Research Article Critique are:

September 21st, October 12th, and November 2nd.

d) Group presentation (30 points)
Once during the semester, each person will work with a group of 3 or 4 other students to organize and present a group activity. Each group will tackle a different developmental period and decide on a controversial topic for the class to consider (such as infertility, day care, school violence, teen pregnancy, binge drinking, assisted suicide). You should be creative in your presentation and design an activity that is interactive. (Try to avoid lecturing.) Plan each presentation to last about 30 minutes. Create a presentation that is well-balanced -that is I’d like for you to present more than one perspective on your issue. Also address how various developmental theories and research findings apply to your topic. For example, does developmental theory help to support or negate your claims? Because of the flexibility in choosing your presentation topic, I would like to meet briefly with each group at least one week before your presentation date to discuss your ideas (this meeting will be 5 points). The remainder of the points will be broken down in the following manner:

- Summary of presentation (10 points): Each group must turn in a brief (3 to 5 pages maximum) written summary of their presentation. The summary should touch upon the main points of your presentation and should include a general statement of the issue, an analysis of how theories and findings of human development apply to your issue, as well as a list of outside references.

- Actual presentation (15 points): I will consider the following aspects of the presentation in assigning a grade:
  - Did you successfully relate your topic to developmental research, concepts, and theory?
  - Have you interpreted and presented the issues accurately?
  - Were your arguments organized and presented in a thoughtful manner?
  - Have you included more than one viewpoint (with respect to gender, race, class, culture, age, etc.?)
  - Were you effective in engaging the class?

The following are the dates and topics of the presentations. Please think about your first, second, and third choices and e-mail me your choices by next Tuesday (9/12) so that we can determine group assignments by the second week of class. Please let me know in advance if you already know of a specific person(s) with whom you would like to do the presentation. I will make the best effort to accommodate everybody’s first or second request.

e) Application Paper (40 points)
This short paper (4-5 pages) will give you the opportunity to demonstrate your understanding of the research, theories, and ideas in the text, lecture, and class discussions and apply your knowledge to “real world” situations. There is no need to do outside reading for this paper. Your paper should demonstrate how your knowledge of developmental psychology informs real experiences or issues and may focus on any one of the following:

- TV show/Movie evaluation: Pretend that you are a reviewer for the FCC. Choose a television show or a full-length movie and identify its target audience (e.g., Sesame street – preschoolers). Evaluate the appropriateness of the television show/movie for that age group. What makes it appropriate or inappropriate? What rating would you give the show/movie?

- Observations at a school or other natural setting: Observe a preschool, elementary, or high school lunch or recess for at least 30 minutes. You will need to make all the necessary arrangements, but feel free to ask me for advice or suggestions.
  Another option is to unobtrusively observe children or adolescents at the mall, library, museum. What aspect of development do you see/overhear? Explain your observations in light of research and theories in human development.

- Intergenerational or cross-cultural interviews: Choose someone of another generation or another culture to interview.
  Develop interview questions based on what we have learned about childhood. How do these experiences differ from your own? Be sure to relate these issues back to the text and discussions from 350.

- Design your own: You may develop another idea for an application paper as long as it fulfills the requirements discussed above and you discuss it with me in advance.

You also have the choice of incorporating your volunteer experience or practica from the current semester into this paper. (More details will be provided on this option in lecture). There are three due date options for the paper; you should choose the date that best fits your schedule. The due dates are October 5th, October 26th, or November 9th.

Important information to know

- Plagiarism is unacceptable and will not be tolerated under any circumstances. Plagiarism does not merely consist of turning in an assignment written by someone else. Plagiarism also occurs when sources of ideas or words are not cited (see attached sheets for further information). Proof of plagiarism or cheating will result in a zero for the assignment, and possibly an F in the class. If you have any question about proper documentation procedures, please come and talk with me. You can also check out the APA writing style web site for help with documentation procedures. (www.ldl.net/~bill/aparev.htm).

- Counseling Services: Sometimes certain material can bring up personal feelings/reactions that students may not know how to cope with. Sometimes events in your life may give rise to these feelings as well. Counseling and Psychological Services may be able to help. (3100 Michigan Union: 764-8312)

- Need Help Writing? English Composition Board (1111 Angell Hall: 764-0429) offers a variety of services, including reviewing rough drafts of students' papers. They also review papers online (www.lsa.umich.edu/swc/OWL/owl.html)

Ground Rules for Discussion

The University of Michigan is a multi-cultural and diverse setting with members who are from a variety of backgrounds and experiences. It extremely important that in this section we create an environment where everyone feels comfortable, supported, and encouraged to express his or her views and concerns. Integral to creating and maintaining this environment is your open-mindedness. You must realize that not everyone feels the same way you may feel about an issue, and not everyone comes from the same background as you. This does not mean that they do not deserve respect or a chance to speak. College is one of the few places where you will get to meet people from all walks of life and with such a variety of experiences. Take this opportunity to learn from what we all have to offer. I'm making a sincere request for everyone here to be responsible in both actions and speech, and maintain a common respect for one another.

Things to keep in mind:

1. Listen carefully to others' ideas (Especially if they are different from yours, and especially if you have a lot to say.)
2. Respect others' rights to hold opinions different from yours. (Challenge the idea, not the person.)
3. Allow everyone a chance to talk. (And take the lead to ask if others have something to add.)
4. Challenge yourself to see things from others' points of view, regardless of how you and they may differ in terms of race/ethnicity, gender, nationality, religion, or otherwise. (Everyone deserves equal respect and to be equally understood.)
5. Be courteous by not interrupting others or having private conversation while others are speaking.
6. Try to think of differing ideas without distortion, exaggeration, or caricaturization. (This can be hard, but it is crucial to understanding a new idea or one that is different from yours.)
7. Support your statements; use evidence and provide reasoning for your points.
